

Starfish Prime is a group of musicians from Roanoke, Virginia who began playing together as friends sharing a common love for music. Soon after their beginning in early 2010, they chose their name as a reference to a nuclear test conducted in the 1960s. Starfish Prime released "White Noise", an EP of originals in 2011, and in December 2013 released "1962", a full length CD of originals.

Through the years Starfish Prime has played songs from the Red Hot Chili Peppers, The Killers, The Beatles, MGMT, and many other bands, incorporating these sounds into their own unique style of alternative rock. Today, Starfish Prime creates their music with a blend of gritty electric guitars, funky bass grooves, and bright acoustic guitar.

Starfish Prime first performed countless hours playing at open mic nights in downtown Roanoke, and has since played at Floydfest, Festival in the Park, Kirk Avenue Music Hall, Noteworthy Music Festival, Roanoke Railhouse Brewery, The H2O Heater, benefit shows and private parties, and more.
