

CREEP DOGG BIOGRAPHY:

Creep Dogg was born on October, 12th 1983 in Long Beach, California. Creep Dogg grew up in a poor lifestyle much of his life; he kept busy as a youth reading and writing poetry. During his high school years Creep Dogg stayed active while writing music. As Creep fell on hard times living from house to house, he started selling drugs on the streets, and that's where his love and passion for music began to grow. He then became one of the original members of the Hip Hop group called "Lifestyles"; the group consisted of Creep Dogg, Snoop Dogg's brother Pretty Tony, and DJ Quiks cousin Hitman. Then as the group "Lifestyles" began to get a heavy buzz throughout California, they later signed a $75,000 dollar record deal with an independent label "OG's To WallStreet". The group worked with and recorded songs for A&R's like Steve Rifkins at Loud Records. Though the album was dismantled due to the C.E.O of OG's To Wall Street (Steve Brooks) being incarcerated due to Federal Drug charges, the group split up and went their separate ways.

Afterwards Creep had a small cameo appearance in the HBO movie "Butter" in 1998, and later landed a feature on a song with Snoop Dogg for the movie soundtrack "Fakin Da Funk" in 1999. Creep Dogg found that he had a calling in the music industry. When Creep realized his true potential to become a successful Hip Hop Artist, he began to pursue his journey toward his debut, known as "CREEPSHOW". The album expresses his life story, from lavish parties to untimely deaths, funerals, remedies for dealing with trials and tribulations and his code for survival in the streets. This is his reality of his life given to you through raw lyrical talent aggressive delivery and versatility with all combined lyrical skills.
