

I am a passionate music producer from Los Angeles, California. First and foremost, I am a music fan. My music style ranges from Latin alternative, Spanish rock, pop, electronic to Hip Hop and RnB. I began working on a music demo in early 2010 which opened a major opportunity. I took my music to the next level and had it professionally recorded at an independent recording studio late 2010. Since then, I have refined my skills as a music producer.

I released an album titled "Joel Sol" on iTunes March of 2012. I also released a self titled E.P. album "Bikini Azul" and other music singles. They are available on iTunes as well as other online digital stores such as Amazon Mp3 and Nokia. I have several videos with music uploaded on "YouTube" and multiple remixes.

During my initial album, I have collaborated with numerous music professionals including a Latin Grammy winning mix engineer and studio musicians who have worked with other artists. During this time period, I was asked to produce an album and was provided the midi/vocal audio files. I completed the production portion in about a month however, the artist decided to leave the music industry. The experience was extremely positive/educational for me and felt humbled to have been giving this opportunity to work with such great people. During the studio sessions, as a team we worked well with each other offering support and praise.

As a music producer, my vision and goal is to create great music which is created on inspiration. My focus is to create "real" unforgettable music arrangements up to the commercial standards of today's and tomorrow's music. Thanks for visiting which makes it possible to share my sound to people all over the world.
