

Luke Aaron was born on December 23, 1989 in Etobicoke, Ontario to Canadian parents Michelle DeGiorgio and Peter Morin. He was raised in the cosmopolitan city of Toronto Ontario. His maternal Grandparents, Reno and Rose DeGiorgio are devoted Roman Catholic and raised Luke with “spiritual” values. Growing up in a loving family and other siblings, the support of his mother, Michelle has kept him on the path to success.

Luke Aaron at three years of age was fascinated by keys of the piano. His mother had gifted him with a color coded piano and was pleasantly surprised how quick Luke channeled his child like energy into following the music notes.

At the age of 10, Luke Aaron was making his own music. Although Luke had not yet comprehended reading and writing music, he simulated the orchestra in his mind and transposed them onto his keyboard. It came very naturally for Luke to simulate and enhance other artist’s music. It was not until the age of 19 that Luke could completely read and write music.

Luke attended schools in Toronto, graduating with honors, and studied music at the Royal and Conservatory of Music. Luke has been described as a man with great talent, unconditional love for music and courage to overturn any obstacle.

With musical influences of contemporary, classical, easy listening and rock ‘n’ roll with the swing of jazz and edge of alternative rap, this multi-talented singer/songwriter, pianist has a diversified sound like no other.

Luke is always ready to accept any new challenge and dares to exceed it, with his forthcoming attitude he is refreshingly real.

Often referred to as “Artist Extraordinaire”, Luke takes great pride in creating music he feels passionate about. He shares his deepest thoughts and life experiences in his lyrics which drives him to share the messages to the world.

In Luke’s very own words “I love sharing my music with the world. If it is so that my music can affect the life of another that brings forth great changes, I have truly been blessed with a gift.”
